I know little to nothing about politics abroad, and so have no comment on the topic. I also support public protest and the right to congregate for that purpose. However, protesting outside of this man's private residence crosses into territory that is as harmful as it is ineffective. When we accept that anything goes, everything will. Homes and children should be off limits—and protesting outside of someone's home affects everyone's sense of peace and comfort. This is not okay.

The corrupt billionaire is targeting dissidents who criticize CCP, while the billionaire is supposedly is anti-CCP.

There are forces at play that we don't see and these forces are all about power and money.

1 wk Like Reply More

Ashley Blackwood Kussman

Bo Kriger I know—and that is the whole issue. A private residence is not an appropriate or acceptable place for protest. The forces at play need to play on their field and leave the private citizen out of it. Because when he's bringing in his groceries, raking his yard, or streaming The Crown on Netflix, he's a private civilian as are his neighbors. And the CCP can take their message elsewhere.

Ashley Blackwood Kussman I totally agree, but it is about laws. Are these protesters breaking laws?

This billionaire is using money (these protesters are paid) to harass but staying within the laws. It is the usual powerful vs intellectuals/thinkers.

Powerful need mindless masses they can feed with fear, misinformation and little bit of money. The only hope is FBI investigating the billionaire. No protest, action, proposed bill happen without money, usually dirty money.

We are continually asked to report suspicious activity to the police. If strangers are repeatedly standing outside my house and I call the police, presumably the police will come, ask who they are, ask to see ID, and ask their purpose. If they don't want to show ID, they should be made to leave. I'm guessing that being asked for ID by the police might be enough to break this up.

This seems like harassment, that's the aim, not protest. Even though there is nothing illegal about standing on a sidewalk temporarily with a poster, if you are not obstructing traffic or entering someone's property or making loud noise. Yes, police can be used by reporting suspicious activity but that's a slippery slope because then there is no end to what all police can be called for under suspicious activity.....using police as a tool for things that should rightly be sorted out by the community is a dangerous path.

The aim here seems like harassment because there are other ample avenues available to these protesters to make their voices heard....despite that if they are deliberately choosing the one that is most harassing, most uncivil and threatening as their option, it is clear what their intent is.

The number of these people who want to behave like this is a thousand times smaller than the number of people who want civility and respect in our community. Next time this happens, ideally the neighbors should come out of their homes and ask these people to leave their street.

Saju, the primary objective here of those people coming from NY everyday in shifts is harassment. If it is protest, there were lot other means of doing that...but coming everyday to someones home 20 people strong, same people, shouting and abusing ....when the kids are learning virtual in home is primarily harassment and enough is enough.

No. Far far more more alarming than the fact of a handful of people with signs standing on public property is the actual substance of this matter and the connections and influence of the billionaire. We lose what is sacred about our country if we get lazy about distinguishing between form and content of political expression. We lose our democracy if we have time to comment about superficial mode of expression but dont have time or will to learn the substance. We all must fight for the right to stand on public property carrying signs peacefully. The handful of people with signs here are misguided (or perhaps threatened) dupes. Fight the actual evil power that influences (or even coerces) them to take this position. Fight (and vote) against the anti-democratic wealth-power evil and corruption. Fight to protect dissents and fight everyday for truth. Dont get distracted. The cause is hideous here and very alarming and the protesters were duped or bribed (or worse) but the mode of protest on its face is not alarming. Dont arrest these people if they have not threatened anyone themselves. Educate them and educate others. Go out there and talk to them and "counter protest" peacefully. Use the freedom you still have here in America to actively show your support for Teng Biao.

Abigail Allen I don't dispute that at all. But as this is community page, I was only commenting on the community aspect.

Do you want to live in a community in which you are called out (by those who "know little" about the issue at hand) and or arrested for standing on a sidewalk holding signs? Or do you want to live in a community where people use their freedoms to communicate to actively stand up and support people like Mr Biao and bother to learn the actual "politics" of the situation rather than focus on the sign holders?

1 wk Like Reply More

Ashley Blackwood Kussman

Abigail Allen As my original post stated, I want to live in a community where the line is respected between home and work. Take it to the streets, the public spaces and forums, but not the home. Let us not forget the murder attempt on NJ Supreme Court Justice Salas which killed her son. We have to uphold a standard and there must be boundaries. I was standing up for Mr. Biao, but I save my politics (unless it's WWP politics) for my personal page. I shared it because I wanted to support his ability to feel safe and supported in his community, which is the very thing being violated by these 'sign holders'. I don't have the power, ability, or connections to protect his person or his voice as a dissident (he likely has that taken care of) nor do I wish to engage to draw more attention to him when he likely wants to have some privacy in his own home. He doesn't need our validation for his life's work and circumstance (although he has it). I find it important to be able to feel at peace in one's own home. It's not a minor point in my opinion.

Abigail Allen true in some aspects - we are now educated because of these misled protestors. But on the flip side this man has children. It's his personal residence. Protests in other parts of the US have compromised families' safety. His front yard is not the place for this. He's a university professor - protest there.

There is a bright and clear line between murder and standing on a public sidewalk holding signs. The WWP kids held signs for "let them play" not too long ago. It's the actual politics of this that is alarming.

1 wk Like Reply More

Ashley Blackwood Kussman

Abigail Allen we will agree that we disagree on the subject. If I ever become a public figure, please don't protest on my street. I really couldn't handle my dog barking constantly and trying to jump through my window. Virtual school would be a struggle with all the noise, and my son would feel awkward playing in the yard (outdoor time he desperately needs). I'll make sure not to do anything super important in this world as I couldn't be sure it wouldn't be protested in such an aggravating way. I'll leave it at that because we won't see eye to eye on this.

1 wk Like Reply More

Abigail Allen Let Them Play did not protest in front of Dr. Aderhold's house. That's the difference that I believe Ashley Blackwood Kussman is pointing out.

People pay a lot of tax money to live in a quiet residential neighborhood. My children ride bikes, skateboard, etc. I run on the sidewalk. This is not just disruptive for their target—it's disrespectful and disruptive to the neighbors as well.

Careful, theres a fine ambiguous line between freedom of speech and "disrespectful". If you dont like peaceful protests on residential sidewalks paid for by tax dollars speak to your elected municipal representatives (who answer to the community generally) about passing an ordinance. Do we know if the protesters are tax paying residents? Dont be distracted, the REAL hideousness here is the politics behind the protesters and the threats not by that handful of misguided people but by those who duped and coerced them from afar. Let's throw the federal "police" after them.

It seems that Guo Wengui, aka Miles Guo and Teng Biao have been trading shots at each other for a while now. Both distrust each other and the others' motives. Considering that the protest is peaceful and orderly, I see nothing wrong when people protest someone (right or wrong) in a peaceful manner. Miles Guo is a public person and to a lesser extent, so is Teng Biao. We live in a country that should always welcome PEACEFUL protests whether we agree with the protesters or not. For the record, Guo Wengui (Miles Guo) has made a lot of inflammatory statements with little offer of proof on many issues. Both he and Teng Biao call themselves Chinese Dissidents (anti-CCP-Chinese Communist Party). We should all try to understand why so many Chinese immigrants hate the Communist government of China and love the USA. We can't continue to turn a blind eye to the Human Rights Violations that CCP has committed and continues to commit.

Mahesh, the opposition is to harassment. We are not judging who is calling whom a CCP spy or what two people have going on between them. What we will not tolerate is 20 unknown masked people coming from NY everyday (all or almost all of them asians, and, in my view probably paid to do this) and intimidating our town resident, our neighbor. They come in two shifts, shout obscenity if any family member comes out, there are kids in home trying to attend virtual school....one of the kid same grade as my son. This is harassment, 100%.

Yes, we have a right to protest...that right is mostly used against Government, not against a private person.....not even sure what protesting against a private person even means.....private persons are subject to laws.....if they think someone is a CCP spy they can go complain to FBI...there are laws against it. If someone thinks a private person is doing something wrong, lodge a complain. If there is no proof or the person is doing nothing illegal, write a letter to him or editor. But if someone is choosing the most harmful, harassing, intimidating way to "protest", the intent is not protest but nasty bullying.

Mike Lage requiring a permit is a good idea but it will have to be given since this crew has a history of just standing there and making noise. Perhaps Mr. Teng can ask for a restraining order?  2

Mike Lage, also, tax paying citizens have a right to use the sidewalk. From what I see, if I was out for a walk in that neighborhood, I would have to step on to the street.  1

These people have no ideological reason, they are getting paid. But getting their names and publicly shaming them, which not not against the law, might deter future harassment these folks are not crazy, they have a script they follow and they are paid. This tactic is borrowed from russian secret services.

Make no mistake, this is just the tip of the iceberg. These protesters are just for money, but the intent of the billionaire is very sinister.

I think we citizens need to ask who is behind the protests of a person who is here because he opposes the communist Chinese government. It would be interesting to find out who the protesters are-after all we know who they are protesting and then determine whether they are agents of the Chinese Government. This would not be the first time or the last that foreign governments have tried to influence American opinion. As far as harrsssment I think there are things the town can do to protect its citizens. We certainly don't want a pizza gate situation .
